The New York Botanical Garden is a museum of plants, an educational institution, and a scientific research organization. Founded in 1891 and now a National Historic Landmark, it is one of the greatest botanical gardens in the world and the largest in any city in the United States, distinguished by the beauty of its diverse landscape and extensive collections and gardens, as well as by the scope and excellence of its programs in horticulture, education, and science.

For Christmas, the Garden's Enid Haupt Conservatory houses an amazing collection of New York City landmarks, all built in miniature out of plant parts. More than a dozen large-scale model railway trains — from late-1800s American steam engines and streetcars to whimsical ladybugs and circus cars to modern freight and high-speed passenger trains and trolleys — traverse nearly a quarter-mile of track across rustic bridges, along overhead trestles, through tunnels, and past waterfalls that cascade into flowing creeks. Building replicas include the Statue of Liberty, Radio City Music Hall, Rockefeller Center, St. Patrick's Cathedral, Ellis Island, the Brooklyn Bridge, the original Penn Station and Yankee Stadium. All are created from leaves, twigs, bark, berries, nuts, seeds, pods, pine cones, cinnamon sticks and other natural materials.
